Pretty easy to work with. The member I.D. is for office work only. When you write to someone it is not necessary to use the I.D.

Please excuse any wrong or out of date information. I had to work from a past directory. The information I did recieve was important but not complete. Sorry for any trouble.

Build Your Life Around Your Model Railroading

Model Railroading is a great hobby. I know I love it. Where else can you become an engineer (civil and rail), a landscaper, architect, logician, planner, thinker, and a host of hundreds of things? Nowhere I say. Model Railroading is a thing that you can build your life on.

I will be leaving for college in a little under six months. I am excited. Some of you may be in this same position. If you are, I wish you the best. But what is to become of your layout? This is something I've thought about a lot. I would hate to come back at Thanksgiving and see...a void where my layout was. If it has to be, then it should be. However, if it has to be done, tell the landlords to be cautious. Your favorite locomotive or building could be headed for that layout in the sky.

Here is something else. Is it possible to have a layout in a dorm? That would be great. Nothing big, just a 2' x 8' wall layout. Any adults that can give an answer? Just don't let your layout disappear and die out.

When you graduate college, take what is left of your layout and incorporate it into the next. That would be great. Every time you see a building or a car or a locomotive you would be reminded of the day long past.

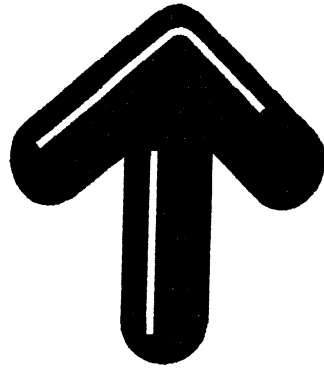

What else can be done with model railroading? Well, how about opening a hobby shop? Building professional layouts? Operating a layout for a club, scout group, etc.? How about taking your favorite part of railroading and majoring in it at college? Electronics, architecture, historic preservation, engineering, construction, etc? Or you could work for a railroad like Conrail, Amtrak, or some regional railroad. Hundreds of ideas for jobs, hundreds of jobs. You don't even have to go into a rail related job. How about a restaurant with a rail theme and a model railroad inside?

Whatever you do, where ever you go, take model railroading with you. It will carry your imagination back to those times when you were in TAMR. It will remind you of great times at the Convention. It will take you back to waving at engineers. It will take you back...

So have fun. Keep life simple. Think about railroads. See you later,
